The Great Dino Dig of 2023

We are delighted to be working with the Carson City Boys and Girls Club of Western Nevada this summer. At the end of this summer the kids will have produced a 4-ft x 6-ft relief sculpture of a Nevadadromeus Schmitti skeleton.

Bones from Clay:

They will begin by modeling the dinos individual bones out of clay. The studio will fire the bones and return them to BGCWN where the high schooler's will "age" them with acrylic paints.

Excavating a Dino:

The finished bones will be buried in a sandbox where teams of junior paleontologists will excavate them using their best scientific digging techniques.

The Reveal:

As the bones are excavated and cleaned, BGCWN staff and volunteers will fasten them to their display board allowing everyone to view the completed sculpture.

Special thanks to local artists Debbie Corona and Jo Moore who collaborated to create the full size dinosaur skeleton and bone identification drawings.
